Reserve price for basic telephone services tender

*154. SHRI SATISH AGARWAL: will the Minister of COMMUNICATIONS be pleased to state:

(a) whehter it is a fact that no reserve price was indicated in the basic and cellular services tender;

(b) if so, what is the rationale and basis of a applying reserve price now;

(c) the details of the reserve price calculated by DOT for all the basic services circles; and

(d) on what considerations the reserve price criterion is not being applied for cellular services tenders?

THE MINISTER OF STATE OF THE MINISTRY OF COMMUNICATION (SHRI SUKH RAM): (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) Initially it was expected that market forces will result in receipt of competitive financial bids which would help the Government in deciding acceptable offers. But the bids received revealed very wide variations in the quoted levy in most of the circles. Levy quoted in some of the circles for basic service was even lower than the quoted levy in Cellular Service or Paging Service tenders. Therefore, it was decided to calculate the reasonable price. It is an inherent part of a tendering process to determine whether the prices offered are reasonable or not.

In the case of Cellular Mobile Telephone Service all offers were found acceptable.

(c) Details of the reasonable price, converted into NPV (with a 10% reduction O for B and 25% reduction for C circles) and kept as the reserve price in the second round of financial bids, are enclosed in the Statement (See below) Regarding Rajasthan and Karnataka Circles, representations have been received from H-I bidders disputing the reasonable price and are under consideration at present.

(d) Cellular Mobile Service is at the introductory stage in the country and hence unlike in the case of Basic Telephone Service, no data is available with the department to enter into a meaningful exercise for determining reasonable price. Hence, no attempt was made to workout reasonable price, in the absence of any histrocial data or demand protections and it was decided to take the quoted offers as market indicator.
